

Today's WSJ reports that professional stock analysts employed by brokerage firms are up to their old sunny ways. These "sell-side" analysts came under fire in 2002 for rendering falsely optimistic trading recommendations. Congressional hearings revealed that during the late 1990s, analysts' "buy" recommendations outnumbered "sell" recommendations by nearly 100 to one.

Read the full piece here.