

tl;dr - American Data Privacy and Protection Act
June 16, 2022

Kristian Stout and Spencer Kahn

ICLE tl;dr

Background... After years of fragmented privacy law across the 50 states, a recently introduced bipartisan and bicameral bill proposes to create a federal privacy regime. Sponsors of the American Data Privacy and Protection Act (ADPPA) say it will set a national baseline for privacy protections and user remedies, while allowing firms to continue to innovate.

But... the bill's breadth and onerous requirements could have unintended negative consequences for consumers. Worse, the measure would only partially preempt state law, arguably leaving the worst of both worlds.

Read the full explainer here.

View Article